

CRAIG LADER
SWRPA

Craig Lader is a senior transportation planner for the South Western Regional Planning Agency, which represents eight municipalities in the Southwestern most corner of Connecticut, including the cities of Stamford and Norwalk. Since joining SWRPA in 2006, Craig has concentrated on long-range transportation planning, and has served as project manager for the Route 7 Transportation & Land Use Study, the Greenwich/Norwalk Bus Rapid Transit Study, and the Coastal Corridor Bus Study. Craig graduated from Columbia University in 2006 with a Masters Degree in Urban Planning. Craig also has a background in accounting, and worked in the financial services sector for eight years before pursuing his transportation planning interests.”
